CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.

In which the Reader is introduced to a Patriot whose services to his country have hitherto never been properly appreciated, and whose memory the Author nobly rescues from the all-devouring Jaws of Oblivion.

CHAPTER II.

In which is recorded a small portion of the Sayings and Doings of the celebrated Liberty Anti-Slavery Convention.

CHAPTER IV.

Showing the Blessings of Liberty to Persons not prepared to enjoy them; and also, how a celebrated Philanthropist "took the Fugitives in," in a double sense, and then turned them out again.

CHAPTER XIII.

In which Mr. Frank and Jimmy cross the Rubicon, vulgarly termed Mason and Dixon's Line, and enter into the confines of Old Virginia, and the Horrors of Slavery.

CHAPTER XIV.

Treating of a Negro Ball, followed by an Indignation Meeting in the Old Dominion State; and showing that such things are conducted there very much as they are conducted everywhere else.

CHAPTER XVI.

In which Mr. Frank lays down the first plank in his Immediate Emancipation Platform, and Mr. Dixey arranges the important preliminary steps of a Gretna-Green Journey; the success of both of which will be made known in due time.

CHAPTER XVII.

Describing how Mr. Frank and Jimmy picked up the wrong Passenger; and how they entertained each other on the way. Also, showing how they finally narrowed the active sphere of their labors, and retired into private life at the expense of the Commonwealth.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Proving most clearly the manner in which a dark night threw Mr. Dixey into dark society; and how he only became enlightened when it was too late to repair his error.

CHAPTER XIX.

Showing how Mr. Frank went out of private life, and how Mr. Dixey went into it; together with many other matters, only to be learned by reading this chapter.
